Read in the paper the other day an item which said—during the Short Skirt craze, merchants should print advertisements on the sidewalks where men would be sure to see them—Correction—the average fellow wouldn't even give one eye to the ad—but say, Boy, you will be all eyes when you look over this Spring line of suits we are showing—Trip down this way and make us work. Bath Slippers selling at 75c to $1.50—pretty good looking too—Non skid Find.

DR. A. F. LINSCOTT HEADS PAN-HELLENIC CLUB

Body Reorganized by College Fraternity Men.

PLAN FOR INTENSIVE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Dinner Meetings To Be Held Each Month—Will Entertain Miami Glee Club.

Reminiscenes of college days combined with enthusiastic plans for the club marked the reorganization meeting of the Pan-Hellenic club of Marion county Wednesday evening at the Busy Bee cafeteria. The meeting was well attended by members of the old organization which abandoned its meetings several months ago, and also by a large number of college fraternity men of recent years.

Dr. A. F. Linscott, president of the former organization, was elected president of the new club. Ralph Rawlings was elected vice president; Amos Burgess, secretary; Dr. C. G. Smith, treasurer. The meeting was in charge of Warren Mapes, who outlined a number of plans for the organization.

Plans were made for an intensive and thorough membership campaign to start at once and it is expected to round up a membership of 100 in the county within a short time. It also was decided to hold a dinner once a month.

The club will give a dinner April 17 at the Busy Bee cafeteria honoring the members of the Miami Glee club who will give a concert that evening under the auspices of the Elks' club. The dinner will be for the members of the Glee club and for the members of the Pan-Hellenic club, families and friends.

PLAY STARTS IN CIVIC VOLLEY-BALL LEAGUE

Exchange-Knights of Columbus Game Proves a Thriller.

The initial games of the Marion Y. M. C. A. City Civic Volley-ball league were played Wednesday evening on the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium floor. Volley-ball promises to be to the fore in the season's sports and a great deal of enthusiasm is being shown by the team members. The second game of last night's schedule between the Exchange and Knights of Columbus teams proved a thriller and was the hardest fought game of the evening. The Knights were victors in two straights, winning by scores of fifteen to eight in the first game and seventeen to fifteen in the second. It was necessary to play two points over the game in the last set to play off the tie score.

The chamber of commerce team defeated the Ad club men in two straight games with scores of fifteen to nine and fifteen to five. The Pyramid squad lost to the Y. M. C. A. men by scores of one to fifteen and two to fifteen. The Pyramid club is made up of the younger men of the Y. M. C. A. and while all are athletes this is their first venture in volley-ball.

The Kiwanis club lost to the Retail Merchants by the close scores of twelve to fifteen and ten to fifteen. Following the games skating was enjoyed.

"Everything He did was done under the Father's eye and the commonest thing was done for the Father," Dr. Gordon said.

Dr. Gordon brought out his idea of walking with God with illustrations from life and urged his audience to carry with them for a day the thought of close companionship with God. PATAGONIA A DESERT THAT IS BLOSSOMING

Land Carved into States or Provinces.

NAME STILL CLINGS IN POPULAR USAGE

Area Nearly Twice That of California—Supports Millions of Cattle and Sheep.

Washington, April 6.—Patagonia, has long been ticketed in many minds with Kamchatka and Timbuktu as representing the ends of the earth. Now it has its supposed strangeness further emphasized by the reported discovery there of a plesiosaurus, a huge lizard like creature thought to have been extinct for many thousands of years. Something of this land which may harbor pre-historic monsters is told in a bulletin issued from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"If the ideas of Patagonia generally held are a bit hazy," says the bulletin, "there is good reason for it, for the region did not really begin to be well known until a generation ago, and even now there are sizable areas that have not been explored. The first fact that needs to be understood about Patagonia is that it is not an official division. Like 'the Northwest Territory' of the early days of the United States, it has been carved up into states or provinces. But even if the name, Patagonia, has been pushed off many official papers, it has clung in popular usage and probably will remain for a long time.

Twice Area of California.

"The extreme southern tip of Argentina would probably be given at the off-hand location of Patagonia in a large number of cases. But the region given this destination really covers one-half the north-and-south extension of the republic, stretching from central Argentina for more than 1,000 miles almost to the top of the continent. Its width varies from about 150 miles in the South to 450 in the North, and its area is nearly twice that of California, our second largest state.

"An idea of the physical condition and economic development of this vast area can be conveyed best perhaps by the statement that Patagonia is to Argentina what the great West and the Southwest were to the United States just after the civil war. There was the myth of the 'great American desert' then—a dry, cheerless country that could never be reclaimed. But with the extension of railroads, farms, ranches and irrigation systems the North American desert' is disappearing.

"Just so Patagonia was labeled a desert for many years; but farms and irrigation works have already reaped great outlaws from the region and millions of head of cattle and a score of million sheep are supported today on only portions of the area. After a few thousand more miles of railway shall have been constructed, a few hundred steam shovels shall have been set to work, and a few millions yard of wire fencing shall have been stretched in place, the Patagonian 'desert' will probably go the way of its North American precursor.

Gave Region Black Eye.

"It is an interesting fact that the statements of a careful scientist—Charles Darwin—did much to give Patagonia an undeservedly bad reputation before the world. Darwin studied chiefly the forbidding desert coast of the lower portion of the country, and his discouraging report was interpreted as applying to the entire country. For decades no one thought it worth while even to explore the hinterland.

"It is westward beyond the semi-arid pampas or plains that the most interesting and least thoroughly known portions of Patagonia are found. Along the eastern slopes of the Andes and in some of the valleys between its parallel ranges is a scenic and climatic paradise. Grassy meadows and forest-clad slopes alternate with sheer cliffs and lower-lying, snow-mantled peaks; and scattered everywhere are innumerable sparkling streams of sky-blue lakes. This is, in fact, one of the most extensive and most wonderful lake regions in the world. A number of these bodies of water are comparable in size to Lake Champlain. Only a relatively few of the smaller lakes have been named and some have been numbered. Many of them, however, have not been explored. It is in this inter-mountain lake region that scientific expeditions will search for the strange creatures reported to have been seen there.

"One of the best known of the Andean lakes of Argentina is Nahuel Haupi. This lake is in the edge of Patagonia but is still nearly 1,000 miles north of Cape Horn. The area of this many-branched body of water is probably in the neighborhood of 250 square miles. Its latitude in the southern hemisphere almost exactly corresponds to that in the northern hemisphere of the Rocky Mountain National park, just north of Denver; and it is about 800 miles from Buenos Aires, the same distance as that which separates Denver from Chicago. Much territory about the lake has been set aside by the government, and the region will be made into one of Argentina's principal national playgrounds. It is planned to harness the outlet river and to build at the eastern margin of the lake; in a region of delightful climate, a great industrial city."

Mr. and Mrs. Josephus Monnette have returned home from California where they passed the winter.

TIRANA IS EUROPE'S REMOTEST CAPITAL

Seat of Albanian Government Has No Railroad.

CLIMATE MAKES IT AN IDEAL HEALTH RESORT

City Is a Sort of Frontier Settlement with Few Municipal Refinements.

Washington, April 6.—"There comes a time in the affairs of very young republics when an inconspicuous, inaccessible capital is a governmental isle of safety.

"Hence Tegucigalpa, of the now uncertain republic of Central America. Hence, also, Tirana, of Albania. Both are inland cities, without railroads," notes a bulletin of the National Geographic society concerning the reported revolutionary attack upon Tirana.

"Any city in Albania would serve as a capital were the absence of a railroad the only consideration. Durazzo, which has held that distinction most of the time since Albania became independent, in 1912, had no railroad, but it had a harbor. And a harbor in the Adriatic, as in the case of Fiume, may be a dangerous asset. Until the beginning of the World war Durazzo and Tirana were connected by a twenty-mile stretch of the only well paved highway in Albania.

Is No Mean City.

"With your conception of Albania as a rugged and primitive land, whose people 'occasionally die from ordinary disease, but more often differences of opinion,' you might be prepared to find in Tirana a sort of frontier settlement with few municipal refinements. If you landed there in an aeroplane you would have few evidences that you were in the present storm center of the wildest country in Europe. You would see a rich bazaar, wide, paved streets, mosques of considerable beauty, many squares with fountains playing in them, residences that are truly palatial, and evidence that commerce and industry thrive.

"You could acquire as souvenirs of your visit specimens of locally made brass work, distinctive and beautiful embroideries, done by the Tirana women and sold by them in the market places, and whether a smoker or not you would wish to take along one of the oddly and intricately carved pipes. The city covers a larger area than its 15,000 or so inhabitants would seem to need, judged by our standards. Yet you might have a difficult time convincing a Tiranian, with his cottage and garden, that a more horizontal mode of living, in crowded apartments, would be more civilized. Once you strolled beyond the bounds of Tirana, though, you would encounter mud houses, and the 'simple life' to an extreme degree.

Albania's One Hero.

"Tirania's situation and climate would make it an ideal health resort, were the outlaw-living sheep herders of inner Albania in need of such a health aid. But more salubrious still, and even more picturesquely situated, on a precipice of the westernmost chain of Albania's mountains, is Kreia—or Krusa—home of the country's great and only national hero.

"In and around Kroia, Scander-beg, this victor in a score of fierce battles with the Turks, fortified himself for a quarter of a century, during that 'time he kept up a guerilla warfare against the Sultan's forces until, in 1461, he was recognized as an overlord of Albania. Legend has it that he slew 3,000 Turks by his own hand."

FUNERALS

Burial of Miss O'Hara.

The body of Miss Katherine O'Hara arrived here from Indianapolis at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon and was taken immediately to St. Mary's Catholic cemetery, where Rev. Father Thomas Kearns held burial services.

Entertains Class.

Miss Florence Rothfuss, No. 579 south Pearl street, entertained the Leaders' Sunday-school class of the Salem church, of which she is teacher at her home last night. A contest within the class for new members between the red and blue teams is in progress with the blues in the lead. Members of the class organized a baseball team naming the teacher as manager of the team and Charles Pfeifer as captain. In a contest an award was made to Felix Horne. The next meeting will be May 2, at the home of Harold Staub, No. 220 Pearl street.

Woman May Be Candidate.

Charleston, W. Va., April 6.—The resignation from the Child Welfare commission, announced today of Mrs. Donald Clark, Wayne county, is interpreted in political quarters as possibly forecasting her entrance into the campaign for the Democratic nomination for congress in the fifth district, for which she has been boomed. "Pressure of other business" was the reason given for the resignation.

SIX NAME TRUSTEES FOR WELFARE ASSOCIATIONS

Fifteen Civic Organizations Invited To Appoint.

PLAN TO ELIMINATE DUPLICATION OF EFFORT

In Raising Money for Welfare Work—Trustees To Meet and Organize.

Six of the fifteen civic organizations requested by the Marion Chamber of Commerce to name representatives as trustees of a Marion Welfare association had complied up to noon today, within a comparatively short time after the invitation went forward. Other organizations have not held meetings since the letters were despatched.

In the list of organizations to which the invitations were mailed are American legion, American Red Cross, Central Labor union, Exchange club, Federation of Women's clubs, Jewish Welfare association, King's Daughters, Kiwanis, Knights of Columbus, Ministerial association, Rotary, Salvation army, Y. M. C. A., Good Government association and the chamber of commerce.

Those Naming Representatives.

Those which have named representatives are Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, American legion, Salvation army, Red Cross and chamber of commerce.

"The need of cooperative effort in raising the funds used by the many organizations in the past has become so apparent that a committee was named to investigate and recommend some plan of centralization and to eliminate duplication of effort in raising money for the welfare groups in Marion," the letter to the organizations states.

"This committee recommended the formation of the Marion Welfare association, the trustees of which are to be named by the various organizations of the city whose purpose is the upbuilding of Marion, whether they are engaged in welfare work or merely have a part in raising of such funds.

To Have Complete Charge.

"Your organization is requested to name two of your members to serve as trustees of this association, certifying the chamber of commerce of your selection.

"The trustees so named are to meet and elect such officers as they deem necessary and to supervise and have complete charge of raising and apportioning funds raised. They are to formulate and adopt any rules and regulations for the successful operation of the Marion Welfare association.

"The Marion Chamber of Commerce wishes to offer the use of rooms and facilities for the successful formation and operation of this much needed organization."

How the Prima Donna Sings Through the Air

"Music from the Clouds" for Those Who Can't Go to the Opera or Theater---And Between the Songs There Are Weather Reports and Speeches by Noted Orators---Thousands Now Enjoy These "Invisible Concerts" Every Hour by Just Taking Down a Receiver

Miss May Peterson, the famous prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, singing "Annie Laurie" in her studio. When she stops another singer will take her place, the program always changing—and the audience doesn't "buy tickets"—just picks up a phone.

The pioneer settler in his cabin in the desert or the city home with kiddies ready for bed, alike are reached by the music from the clouds

WOULD Nero have burned Rome had he been able to send the music of his fiddle broadcast to thousands of fellow Romans daily? Would not his insatiable vanity have been gratified by his worldwide audience and their praises? Would he not have saved for future generations the priceless treasures and architecture of his world capital if he had been able to give such daily concerts?

These questions are made timely by the wonderful development of the wireless telephone of our present day—1922—and the vast audience of more than a quarter of a million persons in the Eastern States alone who listen to nightly concerts by famous artists. They are even more pregnant when one considers the vast possibilities of the wireless telephone, were it utilized by the twentieth century Neros—the Bolshevists with their ideas of destroying civilization.

All Sending Stations Licensed, But Any One May 'Listen In

Under our laws any one may have a wireless receiving set. But only those licensed after careful investigation may have the "sending" apparatus. That accounts, perhaps, for unusual Governmental vigilance for not long ago it was rumored that agents of Lenine and Trotzky planned a nation-wide propaganda by wireless telephone service. Already they send daily bulletins from a wireless telegraph station at Moscow, a service that reaches stations in Poland, Germany and even France.

Wireless telephone experts say that were the Reds to start a wireless telephone propaganda from a ship outside the three mile limit of our coast the Government has means at hand to "jam" the aerial waves so that it would be made futile. Be that as it may, it is safe to say that radical speeches delivered by wireless phone would find any but receptive audiences, because the wireless telephone devotees are of the most progressive and intelligent types of our citizens, most of them owning their own homes.

The thing that wasn't possible before the great war has been made practical to-day. Through the smoke of a thousand battles the wireless phone service for airplane and signal needs has emerged on a peace basis scattering opera, concert, and all manner of vocal entertainment. No use shaking your head and looking "wise" because the wireless phone service is now on a practical working basis and it is providing a regular daily program—anything from grand opera and grand orations to a lullaby or a fairy tale for the children.

Need Only a Receiving Set To Get a Varied Program

Not the least attractive feature of this wireless program is that it does not cost you a cent. You just "listen in." There is no bill at the end of the month charging you so-much-per-ear-full. No speculators. No collectors. No war tax.

All you have to do to get in on this, and bring the opera, the platform and the stage into your home by flicking a switch, is to provide yourself with a wireless phone receiving set. A compact little case weighing barely five pounds, but a complete receiving station in every detail and automatic in operation. It is as easy to operate as a phonograph and you don't have to run back to wind it. The antennæ are rigged on the roof and connected with your receiving set.

Thus you can hear any feature of vocal entertainment issued by the great "broadcasting" station in Newark, known to radio fans as W-J-Z.

And that is not all by any means. You get a lot of useful, handy information by wireless telephone in the bargain. Every hour of every weekday, from 11 A. M. to 8 P. M., you get a regular news service, advance data on what's happening in the world.

On Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 P. M. the children have a story told to them via the wireless telephone by an expert raconteur for juveniles that it would cost you at least $50 to call in person. Popular science night is on Thursdays at 7 o'clock, and the weather man descends from the clouds with his official forecast every day at 11 A. M. and 5 and 10 P. M. Besides, you will also get the "official time" every day in the week at 9:52 P. M., direct from the United States Naval Observatory at Arlington if you are anxious to have the timepieces around the house run like clockwork.

The great wireless telephone service station established by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company at Newark has a "listening audience" of close to a quarter of a million people, amateurs mostly. This enormous radio congregation is not confined to a few border States but extends from Maine to Florida and as far Westward as Kansas and Iowa.

Westinghouse folks have completed up to date "broadcasting" wireless telephone service stations at Pittsburgh (K-D-K-A, 360 meters), at Springfield, Mass. (W-B-Z, 375 meters), and at Chicago (K-Y-W, 360 meters). The normal operating wave length for "broadcasting" from these stations is 360 meters. So that any wireless telephone receiver, no matter where placed within the territory of the United States and Canada, can be certain of a perfect connection with its corresponding service station.

Each of these "broadcasting" radio plants, apart from the transmission equipment, has an attractively furnished studio especially designed for concert work where the singers and the speakers perform. There is a complete stock of musical instruments and devices. The walls are draped in heavy curtains to eliminate the possibility of echo as well as disturbing outside sound. There is an assortment of microphones to meet the varying needs of different forms of work—lectures, quartets, solos, concerts, &c. This producing studio is connected with the transmission station on the roof by an imposing system of interlocking light signals and switches.

It has taken about eight years of unceasing experimental work and practice on the battlefield before the highly perfected and practically automatic equipment of these wireless telephone plants could be made to work together in practical synchronization. Not one brain, but hundreds of different brains attuned to the same purpose made the wireless telephone service as practical and easy to use as the supply of water, gas and electricity.

What It Means to Live in House Equipped With Set

Spend a day in a "radiofied" home! You will find it more inspiring than fireless cookers and reducing exercises. Start the week like a respectable person and taxpayer on a Sunday and see what you get for nothing over the wireless. Of course, for this occasion you attach either the gramfonola or the vocarola amplifying devices so that every one in the room may hear with perfect clarity without the use of headgear.

SUNDAY: Well, let's suppose they'll open with an ecclesiastical piece of some sort. And sure enough at 8 P. M. just as you were beginning to think about the movies, the Rev. So-and-So comes out of space with a sermon. If you can't stand being preached at just turn the switch; then hook on again for the quartet and the organ solo. This is followed by an ample dose of sacred music.

MONDAY: At 11 A. M., the weather man starts his first bulletin. And every hour from then on the News Service tells you what the bandits or the bootleggers are doing and other affairs of state. Hello! here is a new tenor—a little aria, if you please. Monday is a lean day and that's all you get. Official time at 9:52 P. M. and goodnight.

TUESDAY: Ha! we're beginning to live. In addition to the news and the stock service we have on tap for the evening a vocational speaker, two charming pianists, and Sophie Tucker with her coon and darky stuff. By the way, Miss Lawrence will tell you a man-in-the-moon story at 7 P. M., if you have children, or if you haven't maybe you ought to listen anyhow.

WEDNESDAY: About the same, except for the evening when the bright lyric soprano of Harriet Van Emden, or maybe Marie Sundelius of the Metropolitan Opera House will make you sit up and listen with a zest.

THURSDAY: You can applaud if you want to, but they can't hear you, for here is Mabel Howland with a monologue and Capt. Chapter making a speech on "Radio Amateurs as Patriots"—all in addition to the regular hourly news service. Besides, there's the popular science lecture, unless, of course, you hate lectures.

FRIDAY: Mother young soprano that Thomas A. Edison thinks the "finest dramatic voice in the United States" and let's hope the great man is undeceived, or maybe famous May Peterson.

SATURDAY: All forms of news, if wifey can't wait to buy the papers. When you come home you're likely to get stuck for good in your Morris trench because nothing but popular music and jazz comes drooling out of the vocarola on that evening. Official time, 9:52 P. M. Lights out.

You are now posted on the kind of entertainment you are facing when a modern hostess rings you up and asks you to spend a "radio" evening. A regular wireless telephone concert program is furnished by the Westinghouse people so it is possible to plan your radio party in advance. These programs are constantly being extended and improved, but even in their present shape they provide an astonishing amount of really enjoyable entertainment, and much useful information.

If one peeps into the future a bit and tries to visualize every home in the United States radiofied—what an audience for simultaneous appeal! Think of the President of the United States making a speech direct to every home in the land! Consider the vast opportunities for getting any important and urgent message across in the voice of the speaker.

What a Wireless Receiving Set Looks Like and How It Works

A receiving set is a compact package, a case about the size of a large camera. The outfit is of the simplest and has only two adjustments. You operate a single arm over a graduated dial. And occasionally you adjust the crystal detector. That's all. The machine and the central station do the rest.

No additional equipment is needed. The set provides all the essentials—a fixed condenser, a variable tune, a supersensitive crystal detector, a high grade set of headphones, and the antenna outfit.

This set will tune accurately, upward of 600 meters wave length for any central station within range. It is the easiest set to operate and is much favored by amateurs.

These radio centrals are marvels of constructive ingenuity. They consist of antennæ and counterpoise on the roof. The aerial has four wires equally spaced on twenty-foot spreaders. The counterpoise is identical, but instead of swinging from the top of the mast it is mounted about twenty feet above the roof.

The complete radio transmitter is enclosed in metal screening and glass and a blower holds the tube temperature at the best operating value. A switchboard is mounted on the transmitter. One switch connects the set to the station microphone for announcements and the like. Another switch throws in the pickup device employed for phonograph reproductions. A third switch connects it with the "concert studio" on the lower floor of the building.

If the great war had not been fought to such an overmastering extent in the air, necessitating improvements in wireless telephony on a tremendous scale, we might have had to wait for another generation for the present highly efficient "broadcasting" service of wireless phone equipment.

Behind that little five-pound box of your receiving set looms more than a billion dollars in experimentation cost and many million human lives were lost before the contents of that box could do what it does today—one of the great technical miracles of our time.

Use for Explosives

THE destruction of vegetation by explosives has always been the result of war, but a new phase of the subject has recently come to light—the conversion of explosives into fertilizers. The problem of disposing of the large stocks of explosives left on the hands of the belligerent Powers at the end of the war has been occupying the attention of experts in the various countries for some time past, says a British writer. Great quantities of such compounds as trinitrotoluol are said to have been buried or dumped into the sea, as there was no possibility of utilizing them for peace purposes on economic lines. The enormous stocks of propellant explosives and of ammonal and other mixtures of trinitrotoluol with ammonium nitrate, however, represented an important quantity of nitrogen in a form particularly valuable in view of its application for fertilizing purposes in agriculture.

Acting under orders from the Italian Government experiments have been carried out by Signor P. Garelli of Turin, with a view to converting the ammonium nitrate in surplus explosives into a form suitable for use in agriculture. In separating the nitrate of ammonia from the explosive mixture advantage has been taken of the great solubility of the former in water. A fixed percentage of water was added to the explosive mixture, which was then allowed to stand in special receptacles. A concentrated solution of nitrate of ammonia was thus obtained, which was separated by decantation. A quantity of powdered peat was then mixed with the solution, which, after drying, takes the form of a fertilizing material, which has been called by Signor Garelli "nitrie peat." It has the following composition: Water, 17.8 per cent.; ash, 18.8 per cent.; nitrate of ammonia, 42.8 per cent.; organic matter, 20.6 per cent. The product in appearance is a blackish powder, and contains 16.4 per cent. of nitrogen, together with 0.06 per cent. of phosphorus anhydride and 1.8 per cent. of potash.
